The heart is a fragile part of the body that can easily be broken if it's not handled with care; which is why one should be very vigilant of whom they choose to give it to. Mia, is a 23-year-old independent phlebotomy tech who is living her life worry and drama free. It isn't much, but she isn't complaining and it's enough to take care of herself and maintain the lifestyle that she is accustomed to. After being persuaded by her friends, Kelsi & Terri to go out on a Thursday night, she ends up at the same nightclub as the streets supplier, the main attraction, a guy she's been lusting over since she was a teenager; Dola The Don. She's much older now and she's taken aback when he finally approaches her after all these years and gives her a dose of the glamorous but street lifestyle that he lives. The questions follows, will it be too much for her to handle or will she be able to secure her heart in the process? The only difference between Dola and the average man is the fact that he's fine, black, ruthless, and rich. He ends up falling for Mia, but will he fall hard enough to let the streets go, and focus on what they are trying to build by keeping her loved, happy, and secured?
