White Rabbit Time (Agent C Series) (Volume 3) Lynda

Ten-year-old Laurie is called "Sis" by her family. She would like to use her creative imagination, but is tightly scheduled with tennis and piano lessons, swimming practice, and the supervision of her four-year-old sister, Allie.

As an outlet, Sis invents stories for her fashion dolls at night before she falls asleep, but this secret world is threatened after young Allie reveals that her little friend, Mellie, was responsible for two heads being pulled off the dolls.

Wondermart is a store with anything and everything. Can Sis find something there to help solve the problem? Only time will tell.

Mother hurries off to order new glasses when the three arrive. They are short of time as usual, so Sis has to supervise Allie while the younger girl has her Easter photo taken.

While they wait, a White Rabbit leaves the photo setting and approaches them. When he gives Sis an old pocket watch, time becomes distorted.

The two sisters embark on a strange journey through the store. On the way, they make new friends and do new things.

Sis finds just what she needs at Wondermart. It is time...time to think and dream, time to create, time to invent and play...time to figure out who she is, and who she is becoming.

...And she learns to defend her right to have it.

White Rabbit Time (Agent C Series) is an illustrated middle-grade chapter book.

Agent C is an embedded reading coach who makes cameo appearances in all of Lynda's Agent C Novels. In White Rabbit Time, he takes the role of the little man dressed as a rabbit in the photo department. The gift of his pocket watch causes a major shift in the story's plot.

When something causes such a dramatic change, it is called a "catalyst". The "C" in "Agent C" stands for the word "catalyst".
